PhD Course

Syllabus

Convenor: Ole Hammerslev

Spring Term 2023 Course outline

Time: 10.15-12

Meeting room: TBC + Zoom

Aim of the course

The aim of this course is to introduce PhD students to various theoretical classical and modern perspectives and approaches within the sociology of law, legal anthropology and socio-legal studies.

Content of the course

The course will be delivered through seminars where samples of research perspectives will be critically presented and discussed in the broader context of the field of socio-legal research.

Course implementation/forms of teaching

The course is delivered through a combination of lectures, exercises and seminars. Participation in exercises and seminars is compulsory. In case of legitimate absence caused by accidents, sudden illness or similar events, students are given additional tasks to complete. This also applies to students who have missed lectures due to their duties as student representative.

Language of instruction

English

Form of examination

The students shall actively participate in the seminars and present two research perspectives, one of which must not be related to their thesis. In addition, they shall author three papers (each about 2500 words long).

The assignments are described below.

Grading scale according to university regulation
